The 4-Hour Work Week: Escape 9-5, Live Anywhere, and Join the New Rich, Timothy Ferriss

Very much enjoyed this book. It's a quick read, should take no more than a few hours. I read it when we were returning from a week in Florida, so I had escaping to the beach on my mind. Talks about some great ideas on how to set up your business to work on its own, consistent with Gerber's e-Myth book. And Ferriss covers outsourcing quite nicely as well.

key concepts that were interesting to me; 1) the MVP, minimum viable product - don't waste effort on product features that the customer is not willing to pay for. Get out your idea into a customer consumable form as soon as possible and then learn about what they want and are willing to pay for. The second concept is 'the pivot' - don't over focus on your idea if it is not making measureable progress, take what you've done and pivot as much of your expended work as possible to a new concept, market, customer, etc. that creates value for the customer and you.

The Power of HABIT: Why We Do What We Do in Life and in Business, Charles Duhigg

Connects some of the latest brain science to why its difficult to change our habits. It presents a 'habit cycle', i.e. Cue - Routine - Reward, in how we develop habits and how to break/change them. It also talks about the notion 'familiarity' - i.e. in order to modify our habits, we must do it in context of what we're used to.
